

Two numbers per session.

What my clients log, and why nothing more.

The more you ask people to log, the less comes back. Almost nobody keeps a full training diary going for long. So I ask my clients for exactly two things per session. That is enough to run a whole four-week block, and at the end it's in black and white whether it worked.

01

The two numbers

First: session done, yes or no. Log it even after the fact. What isn't written down can't go into the planning.

Second: for two to three main lifts, your heaviest set, with weight and reps. For example 100 kg for 8.

Not needed: every set, every RPE, every accessory.

02

The main lifts

Pick two to three compound lifts from your plan that show up every week. They stay the same for all four weeks. If you change the lift every week, you have nothing to compare at the end.

03

Week 1 is a calibration week

For every lift without a set working weight, week 1 only gives you a rep range and an RPE. You pick the weight and write it down. RPE 8 means you had two more reps in you.

From week 2 on, the plan has fixed numbers, and none of them are guessed. That's the decision I make for my clients.

04

Test after four weeks

Testing your strength every week tells you nothing. How you feel on the day swings more than your progress does. At the end of the four weeks, the main lifts get retested.

If the number hasn't moved, volume or recovery gets adjusted first. The lift only changes after that.

Your block

Write your main lifts at the top. Each week: sessions planned and done, plus the heaviest set of each main lift. Print it or fill it in on your phone.

	Sessions	Main lift 1	Main lift 2	Main lift 3
Example	3 of 3	100 kg × 8
Week 1 Calibration week	___ of ___	kg ___ × ___	kg ___ × ___	kg ___ × ___
Week 2	___ of ___	kg ___ × ___	kg ___ × ___	kg ___ × ___
Week 3	___ of ___	kg ___ × ___	kg ___ × ___	kg ___ × ___
Week 4	___ of ___	kg ___ × ___	kg ___ × ___	kg ___ × ___
Retest End of week 4		kg ___ × ___	kg ___ × ___	kg ___ × ___

AFTER THE RETEST

Number went up

The block worked. The next one builds on it.

Number stayed the same

Adjust volume or recovery first. The lift stays.

Sessions always missing on the same day

Then the day is the problem, not your discipline. The session belongs on a different day.

YOUR NUMBER

Send me your number from today as a DM. If you want someone to read your numbers and write the next block: that is what I do.

VOLTR.

Lukas Plassnig
Vienna · New York · voltr.at